Glossary

Common Travel Area – The geographic area comprising the UK, Republic of Ireland, Isle of Man and the Channel Islands, between which there are no immigration controls.

Destitute Plus – a case law term requiring that a person needs to have an infirmity additional ('plus') to destitution or the threat of destitution to qualify for social care services.

Discretionary Leave – Leave granted at the discretion of the UKBA. The terms of the leave can vary.

Failed Asylum Seeker¹ - an asylum seeker whose case has been refused and who has no further in-country rights of appeal.

Habitual residence – required for entitlement to a range of benefits habitual residence is not defined in benefit regulations and should be determined by looking at all the circumstances in a given case. Factors to be considered include the intention to stay in the UK, the period of actual residence and employment record.

Illegal entrant – a person who has entered or sought to enter the UK unlawfully, including by deception. Defined at s. 33(1) Immigration Act 1971.

Maintenance undertaking - means a written undertaking given by another person in pursuance of the immigration rules to be responsible for that person’s maintenance and accommodation.

Overstayer - a person who illegally remains in the UK after the period of their permitted visit expires.

Person Subject to Immigration Control – a person who requires leave to enter or remain in the UK.

Points Based System – a new tiered system for controlling the immigration to the UK of persons from outside the EEA for work or study reasons.

Public funds – this guide uses the definition of public funds contained in paragraph 6 of the Immigration Rules.

Right of abode – the right to enter, remain, leave and return freely to the UK without the need to obtain ‘leave’ from the immigration authorities.

Third Country National – a national of a country outside the EEA.

UK Border Agency – the Home Office agency that deals with immigration. For simplicity this guidance document uses the term UKBA to refer to the Home Office and the Secretary of State for the Home Department.

¹ This guidance document adopts the term ‘failed asylum seekers’ throughout as it is the terminology found in statute and UKBA briefings. No pejorative meaning is intended in the word ‘failed’

Introduction

Within the nation-state system, rights are generally accessed from one’s state of nationality and not from another nation-state. Because immigrants are outside their state of nationality, their access to rights is more complex. When determining rights to benefits and welfare services it is helpful to divide immigrants into three broad categories:

Category one: Nationals of countries with which the UK has a political agreement. For this group, treaty agreements between states allow their nationals to access rights within each other’s territories. This category comprises mainly of European Economic Area (EEA) nationals.²

Category two: People who come to the UK for protection from persecution or human rights abuse. If protection is granted they will be able to access their rights from the UK as a ‘surrogate’ state. However, while their claim for protection is being processed their rights are strongly curtailed. This group includes asylum seekers (who are excluded from mainstream benefits) and those who have been granted refugee status or other forms of protection (who have extensive access to benefits and welfare services).

Category three: Third Country Nationals (TCNs) who do not fit into either of the above groups. These immigrants tend to have minimal access to benefits and services in the UK with their leave to remain in the UK often subject to a ‘no recourse to public funds’ condition. This group include immigrants who have come to work, study or for family reasons. In general terms this group are expected to return to their country of origin to access their rights.

The above categorisation is a simple, but helpful, summation for the complex rules that govern an immigrant’s access to benefits and welfare services. It is important to bear in mind which category an immigrant falls into as this is a key determinant of the area of law under which their entitlement arises.

In addition to these rules there are human rights standards that impose a certain minimum standard below which the treatment of people is not permitted to fall. Human rights are usually engaged in situations where there is no other recourse to support and the level of hardship cannot be alleviated by return to the country of origin.

Individuals may also be given leave to remain on a discretionary basis by the UKBA. This is called Discretionary Leave and the terms of the leave can vary.

² There are other nationals who benefit from treaty arrangements with the UK
1. Category One: Treaty Related rights

The most significant here are nationals of the EEA. These nationals are subject to special rules related to promoting the free movement of labour and rights of EU citizens to live and move freely across the EU. The strongest rights come through the free movement of workers and entitlements to benefits and welfare services are linked to being in work or self-employment. Detailed rules apply when EEA nationals cease to be in work or self-employment. Among EU nationals Bulgarians and Romanian rights are restricted by transitional arrangements which apply until 31 December 2013. These limit their access to the UK labour market, consequently the entitlements of this group are dealt with separately in the section on A2 nationals.

Other, less well known, international treaties have consequences for the rights of immigrants from certain countries. For instance, nationals of states that have ratified the European Convention on Social and Medical Assistance (ECSMA) and/or the Council of Europe Social Charter (CESC) have rights to assistance if they are lawfully in the UK. Co-operation and association agreements may allow nationals of Algeria, Israel, Morocco, San Marino, Tunisia and Turkey access to specific entitlements. Special provisions apply to persons who left Montserrat after 1 November 1995 due to the volcanic eruption. As far as possible these additional arrangements will be noted in the text.

Finally, some Commonwealth citizens may have retained a right of abode in the UK. Where they can prove they have the right to abode Commonwealth citizens would not be subject to immigration control and entitled to benefits and welfare service.

2. Group Two: Protection Related Rights

People who come to the UK to seek protection from persecution and/or serious human rights abuse enter a different immigration stream called the ‘asylum process’. Those waiting for a decision on their case are called ‘asylum seekers’. Some of these individuals will have their claim recognised under the 1951 Refugee Convention and are then recognised as ‘refugees’. Others may not be awarded refugee status but will nonetheless see their claims for protection recognised and be awarded ‘humanitarian protection’. Refugees are treated the same as UK nationals in terms of entitlements to benefits and welfare support.

Asylum seekers waiting on a decision may be supported outside the mainstream benefits system by the UKBA. Asylum seekers whose claims for protection have been refused and who have no further in-country rights of appeal are termed ‘failed asylum seekers’ and are expected to return to their country of origin. Failed asylum seekers have no entitlements to support but may qualify for ‘hard case’ support from the UKBA. Local Authorities may have duties to support asylum seekers and failed asylum seekers with social care needs.

3. Group 3: Other Immigrant Groups

People who do not fall into the above two categories are TCNs without any claims for protection. They may have come to the UK to work, study or for family reasons. They usually have no recourse to public funds and are excluded from accessing benefits or welfare services. The circumstances in which this group can access support are limited.
No Recourse to Public Funds

What does ‘no recourse to public funds’ mean?

Immigration law provides that a person may be given limited leave subject to various conditions. These conditions usually include that a person must be able to support themselves without accessing public funds or causing any member of their family to require additional public funds or to live below a particular standard of accommodation or maintenance. This condition is often termed having ‘no recourse to public funds’.

The Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 also excludes ‘persons subject to immigration control’ from benefits and from housing authority allocation and homelessness assistance unless they are of a category prescribed by the UKBA.8

What are ‘public funds’?

The term ‘public funds’ has a specific meaning in immigration law and does not include all services funded by public money. Financial support from local authorities under social work or children’s legislation is not a ‘public fund’ in this sense. Neither are health services or education – although access may be restricted by other rules.

‘Public funds’ are defined in paragraph 6 of the Immigration Rules. In Scotland these are:

- attendance allowance, severe disablement allowance, carer’s allowance and disability living allowance;
- income support;
- council tax benefit;
- housing benefit;
- a social fund payment;
- child benefit;
- income based jobseeker’s allowance;
- income related allowance (employment and support allowance);
- state pension credit;
- child tax credit and working tax credit
- housing and homelessness assistance.9

This is a complete listing of what constitutes ‘public funds’ in Scotland for the purposes of the Immigration Rules.

7 Immigration Act 1971 section 3(1)(c)
8 Sections 115, 118 and 119 respectively
9 This list is exhaustive. Other contribution based benefits such as contribution-based job seekers allowance or maternity allowance do not count as public funds. Also NHS services and education services do not count as public funds.
Who is a ‘person subject to immigration control’?

In relation to the exclusion from benefits section 115(9) of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999, a ‘person subject to immigration control’ is defined as:

‘a person who is not a national of an EEA state and who-

(a) Requires leave to enter or remain in the UK but does not have it;
(b) Has leave to enter or remain in the UK which is subject to a condition that he does not have recourse to public funds;
(c) Has leave to enter or remain in the UK given as a result of a maintenance undertaking; or
(d) Has leave to enter or remain in the UK only as a result of paragraph 17 of Schedule 4

Section 118(6) (housing authority accommodation) and section 119 (homelessness: Scotland and Northern Ireland) use a slightly different definition:

“Person subject to immigration control” means a person who under the 1971 Act requires leave to enter or remain in the UK (whether or not such leave has been given).

It is clear that the term ‘persons subject to immigration control’ includes overstayers, illegal entrants, sponsored immigrants, people on work, student or family visas with no recourse to public funds, and, people pursuing certain immigration appeals. These people are not entitled to those benefits defined as ‘public funds’ and they are not eligible for housing allocation and homelessness assistance.11

What is less clear is when EEA nationals can be ‘persons subject to immigration control’. This issue lies at the heart of the Court of Appeal decision in The Mayor and Burgesses of the London Borough of Barnet v Hassan Ismail and Ms Nimco Abdi. The judgement notes that following entry into the European Union the Immigration Act 1988 sets up special arrangements for EU nationals in section 7:

‘a person shall not... require leave to enter or remain in the United Kingdom in any case in which he is entitled to do so by virtue of an enforceable Community right or of any provision made under section 2(2) of the European Communities Act 1972.’

Thus EEA nationals are not ‘persons subject to immigration control’ as long as they are exercising an ‘enforceable Community right’. The judgement found that to be exercising an ‘enforceable Community right’ an EEA national needs to be a ‘qualified person’ under regulation 14 of the

10 A person may, however, apply for housing allocation prior to becoming eligible for housing allocation
11 There are exceptions as some categories of immigrant are prescribed as exempt from these exclusions by the Social Security (Immigration and Asylum) Consequential Amendments Regulations 2000, No 636 and the Persons Subject to Immigration Control (Housing Authority Accommodation and Homelessness) Order, 2000, No 706

Immigration (EEA) Regulations 2000. Consequently, an EEA national becomes a ‘person subject to immigration control’ if they are not a qualified person (i.e if they do not have the right to reside). The subsequent Immigration (EEA) Regulations 2006 make clear:

In accordance with section 7 of the Immigration Act 1988(1), a person who is admitted to or acquires a right to reside in the United Kingdom under these Regulations shall not require leave to remain in the United Kingdom under the 1971 Act during any period in which he has a right to reside under these Regulations but such a person shall require leave to remain under the 1971 Act during any period in which he does not have such a right.

Consequently, in relation to entitlements to benefits, housing and homelessness, statutory orders have adjusted entitlements such that EEA nationals need to meet a ‘right to reside’ test. In some instances the right to reside test laid down in the statutory instruments is narrower than restricting entitlement to those with a right of residence and excludes those with only an initial right to reside or an extended right to reside as a jobseeker from housing and homelessness assistance and various benefits.

Social Care

Social care in Scotland includes the services provided by local authorities under the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968 and the Mental Health (Care and Treatment) Act 2003.

Who can access social care?

Schedule 3 of the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002 lists four classes of persons ineligible for support under sections 12 and 13A of the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968. These classes are:

- those who have refugee status in another EEA state;
- EEA nationals (unless refusing support breaches their rights under the Community Treaties);
- failed asylum seekers; and
- persons unlawfully in the UK.

Note, however, the exclusions under the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002 do not apply to children. Withholding support is also subject to human rights considerations and local authorities will need to consider whether a human rights breach will result when refusing support under sections 12 and 13A of the Social Work (Scotland) Act.

15 The Act excludes them from s.45 Health Services and Public Health Act 1968 (local authority: welfare of the elderly); s 12 and s. 13A Social Work (S) Act 1968 (social welfare services); s. 254 and sch 20 NHS Act 2006; s 22, s29 and s 30 Children (Scotland) Act 1995; s .29(1)(b) Housing (S)Act 1987 (interim duty to accommodate in case of apparent priority need where review of a local authority decision has been requested).

In addition to the above withdrawal of social care support, persons to whom section 115 of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 applies are excluded from sections 12, 13A (residential accommodation with nursing) and 13B (provision of care and after-care) of the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968 and sections 25 to 27 (provision of services) of the Mental Health (Care and Treatment)(Scotland) 2003 where their need has arisen solely due to destitution or the anticipated effects of destitution. Section 115 excludes ‘persons subject to immigration control’, but in its definition of this group excludes EEA nationals at the outset. Under section 115 prescribed categories can also be exempted from the exclusion by statutory order. Immigrants who are excluded from social care as ‘persons subject to immigration control’ include:

- illegal entrants;
- overstayers;
- those who have leave on condition they have no recourse to public funds;
- those sponsored under a maintenance undertaking; and
- those who have leave to pursue an appeal.

Accessing social care as a ‘person in need requiring assistance’

The exclusion from social care provision under the 1999 Immigration and Asylum Act is qualified and applies only in those instances where the need has arisen solely due to destitution or the physical effects, or anticipated physical effects, of destitution. Where the need arises apart from destitution a local authority has a duty to assess and provide support.

The exclusion from social care provision in England and Wales derives from section 116 of the 1999 Immigration and Asylum Act which inserts the clause refusing support where need arises solely due to destitution into section 21 of the National Assistance Act 1948 and related legislation. The corresponding statutes in Scotland are the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968 and the Mental Health (Care and Treatment) (Scotland) Act 2003.

Case law in England and Wales on what was often called the ‘destitute plus’ clarified exceptions to the exclusion from support under s.21 of the National Assistance Act 1948. Within this case law the ‘destitute plus’ are defined as the ‘infirm destitute.’ Persons subject to immigration control are ‘destitute plus’ if they are destitute within the meaning of s.95(3) Immigration and Asylum Act, but (importantly) have care needs that arise for reasons other than destitution. It is this additional element of need due to infirmity (the ‘plus’) that makes local authorities responsible for meeting this groups’ needs. In M v Slough Baroness Hale clarifies that the distinction being made is that between the ‘able bodied’ destitute and the ‘infirm’ destitute, with local authorities having social care duties only towards the latter. The key is that entitlement arises from the need for care and attention and not from the destitution.

The UKBA will apply this case law in Scotland, but it is worth noting that any issue over the application of M v Slough has not been tested in the Scottish courts. There are several difficulties that local authorities need to consider when determining the application of M v Slough in Scotland:

1) Section.21 NAA on which the case law is based was repealed and replaced in Scotland by s.12 Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968. It is possible that the wording of the Acts differs to such a degree that the House of Lords ruling in M v Slough cannot be seen as highly persuasive in terms of its application to the Scottish Statutes. However, the explanatory notes to the 1999 Immigration and Asylum Act on s.120 state: “This section replicates the effect of sections 116 and 117 with respect to Scotland, similarly removing entitlements to general social welfare provisions”. On this basis it seems that the intention of Parliament is to replicate the effect of the exclusion from s.21 National Assistance Act in s.116 by similarly excluding persons subject to immigration control from social care assistance unless the need arises from causes other than destitution. On this basis it should be considered whether the judgement should be seen as providing persuasive precedent in Scotland.

2) The lead judgement in M v Slough makes much of the phrase a person ‘in need of care and attention’ found in the NAA. This phrase is not in the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968 where the language is of a person ‘in need requiring assistance’. Key in the lead judgement is Baroness Hale’s finding that ‘the natural and ordinary meaning of the words ‘care and attention’ in this context is ‘looking after’. Looking after means doing something for the person being cared for which he cannot or should not be expected to do for himself”. Local authorities need to consider whether the judgement applies in Scotland in the absence of the same phrase in the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968.

3) It could be said that aside from the particular phrase ‘care and attention’ the judgement makes a key distinction between the ‘able bodied’ and the ‘infirm’. Local authorities should consider whether Baroness Hale’s finding turns on the fact that the duty arises because of the need and not because of destitution or poverty.

Can accommodation be provided under the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968?

Local authorities in Scotland need to consider their ability to provide accommodation under the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968. The difficulty arises from Scottish case law which restricts the provision of accommodation under the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968 to residential accommodation (i.e. accommodation in an institution or hostel). The case of Assessor for Edinburgh v Brodie (1976) considers whether s.12 empowers a local authority to supply a house to a disabled person. Lord Thomson concludes: “if a local authority wishes to supply as a home for a disabled person a house which makes special provision for the needs of that disabled person, the local authority has power to do so under the Housing Acts and not under the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968”

Local authorities need to consider the consequences of the Brodie judgement in terms of their ability to provide (non-managed) housing for immigrants as part of addressing their social care needs when an immigrant is excluded from the provisions if the Housing (Scotland) Act 1987.

It could be argued that the judgement in Brodie can in no way have been prescient of the 1999 Immigration and Asylum Act or that housing and community care provision by local authorities have changed substantially since 1976 such that the restrictions surrounding the type of housing provision are no longer relevant. However, Brodie is a Scots case in a court equivalent to the Inner House and, as such, is binding on local authorities in Scotland.

What about Human Rights?

The Human Rights Act 1998 requires public bodies such as local authorities to uphold the rights contained in the European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR). Local authorities should consider in all cases whether exclusion from services and support would amount to a human rights breach. The NRPF network provides a Human Rights Assessment Template that can be used by local authorities for this purpose.27

Other routes to providing for immigrants

Scottish Local Authorities have the power under s. 20 of the Local Government of Scotland Act ‘to promote wellbeing’. It is for local authorities in Scotland to consider whether to use these powers to provide support for immigrants excluded from other support. However, this is a power only and imposes no duty on local authorities. Furthermore, s.20 is subject to limiting provisions in s.22 and local authorities will need to consider whether the restrictions on local authority powers in the 1999 Immigration and Asylum Act and the 2002 Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act constitute such ‘limiting provisions’ such that it is not open to local authorities to utilise section 20 to provide support to immigrant groups specifically excluded by prior legislation.

27 NRPF Connect, UK-wide database of cases supported by social services, is currently being developed and is to be launched in April 2012.
Human Rights Considerations

The Human Rights Act 1998 incorporates the European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR) into UK law. This means that the articles of the ECHR have direct effect inside the UK and human rights cases can be heard in domestic courts. The Human Rights Act places a duty on all public bodies, including local authorities, to comply with the rights set out in the Convention. The key Convention rights in relation to immigrants are: Article 3 (prohibition on torture or inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment); Article 8 (respect for family and private life) and, in cases where a person is involved in court proceedings, Article 6 (right to a fair and public hearing).

In assessing whether a person needs to be supported by the local authority to prevent a human rights breach the local authority should be clear that it is assessing whether a human rights breach would occur in the UK. It is for the UKBA to determine risk on return to the country of origin. A local authority needs to consider whether it is open to a person to return to their country of origin, leaving aside any consideration of risk on return. Where there are practical barriers to return the local authority should then assess whether the person should be supported to prevent a human rights breach while those practical matters are resolved. Where there are legal barriers to return the local authority should assess whether the person should be supported until any outstanding matters have been concluded. In determining whether a person facing practical or legal barriers to leaving the UK should be supported by the local authority all avenues of support available to the person should be considered. The NRPF network provides a Human Rights Assessment Template that can be used by local authorities.

Where no barriers to return exist, a local authority may be able to discharge its duties under the Human Rights Act by offering travel assistance. Where return would prevent a breach, it would be lawful for a local authority to offer assistance with returning a person to their country of origin. Case law has determined that where a person is ‘freely able’ to return to their country of origin and refuses travel assistance any hardship or degradation they suffer is a consequence of their decision to remain in the UK and any resulting human rights breach has not been caused by the local authority. The local authority should consider the impact of offering travel assistance in its human rights assessment. Local authorities should be mindful of their duties towards children where parents or carers refuse to return to their country of origin. A child in need assessment needs to

\textit{Article 3}

Article 3 is the absolute prohibition on ‘torture, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment’. The threshold for a breach of article 3 is extremely high.\textsuperscript{35} Local authorities need to consider whether refusing support would result in a person being tortured or exposed to inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

\textit{Article 8}

Article 8 is often the most relevant for local authorities as this involves cases where the UKBA is not responsible for providing support while the claim is being determined. Article 8 is the ‘right to respect for his private and family life, his home and his correspondence’. It is a qualified right and can be interfered with where it is ‘necessary in a democratic society in the interests of national security, public safety or the economic well-being of the country, for the prevention of disorder or crime, for the protection of health or morals, or for the protection of the rights and freedoms of others’.

Claimants of Article 8 rights are not entitled to asylum support and a local authority should consider whether it is necessary to provide such families with support to prevent a human rights breach occurring while the Article 8 claim is being determined by the UKBA. In the case of \textit{Birmingham CC v Clue} the Court of Appeal sets out various elements of a human rights assessment in the case of someone who is pursuing an Article 8 claim that does not involve risk on return. The assessment had two elements: (i) is the claimant destitute? (this involves considering all the avenues of support available to the claimant - including work where there is permission to work; (ii) is the application abusive or hopeless (care should be taken not to pre-judge the UKBA’s decision under article 8).

\textit{Article 6}

Where a person is a defendant in criminal proceeding or a party in civil proceedings it may be relevant to consider whether return to the country of origin would infringe their right to a fair and public hearing under Article 6. Under this Article a person involved in legal proceedings in the UK may need to remain in the UK until such a time as his case was heard. Again such a person would not be eligible for asylum support and it would be for the local authority to consider whether support would be needed in the interim to prevent a human rights breach.

Travel Assistance

Local authorities have powers to assist and arrange travel enabling a person to return to their country of origin. In situations where return is a viable option, a local authority should consider whether offering travel assistance effectively discharges its duties under the Human Rights Act as part of a human rights assessment. However, even when parents refuse offers of return travel it must be remembered that the local authority’s duties towards any children remain.

Local authorities can offer to arrange return travel for EEA nationals and those recognised as refugees in another EEA state. These powers do not allow for any cash payments to be made directly to the persons travelling. Where there are children involved accommodation can be arranged pending return.

Where a local authority is approached by asylum seekers or people who are unlawfully in the UK looking to return to their country of origin these should be referred to the Choices Assisted Voluntary Return Programme run by Refugee Action (Tel: 080 800 0007). Alternatively Embassies may also be able to purchase travel tickets for their nationals.

General Guidelines

Immigrants should receive a humane response when approaching local authorities. Confidentiality should be preserved and data protection issues need to be explained. Informed consent should be sought when sharing information with other agencies. Local authorities’ duties to inform other agencies should be explained at the outset. Local authorities have a duty to inform the UKBA of anyone who is unlawfully in the UK or who is failed asylum seeker.39

When dealing with people who have a limited or no understanding of English, interpreters should be used to ensure information has been understood. The use of family members as interpreters has a negative impact on the quality of interpretation and can interfere with confidentiality. Using family members as interpreters should be avoided where possible.

A local authority’s response to requests for assistance should be consistent. It is good practice for local authorities to keep within legal duties when offering assistance. Where a local authority cannot offer assistance it is good practice to offer advice and signposting to other avenues of support. But this should not be done where it is clear that someone will not qualify for a service or as a substitute for local authority services.

Good practice in assessment requires a single assessment approach with an identified lead officer. A local authority assessment of the duty to support has two basic elements:

1. An eligibility test
2. An assessment of need

If a person is destitute the local authority can provide temporary emergency accommodation while assessments are being carried out.

Eligibility Test

Establishing eligibility requires:

(a) Establishing immigration status. Local authorities should establish designated officers to liaise with UKBA through their Local Immigration Team.40 Individuals presenting at local authority offices should provide proof of identity and immigration status.

(b) Establishing if a person is ineligible for support under schedule 3 Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002. Exclusions under schedule 3 do not apply to children. It is up to an applicant to show that they do not fall into one of these categories. Persons ineligible under this legislation are:

a. Persons with refugee status in another EEA country and their dependants
b. EEA nationals\(^{41}\) and their dependants
c. Failed asylum seekers who are not complying with removal directions and their dependants
d. Persons unlawfully in the UK\(^{42}\)

A person who is ineligible under schedule 3 may access support where they can show that this is necessary to prevent a breach of their human rights or their rights under the EU treaties. In the case of a possible human rights breach a human rights assessment would be the lead assessment in the case of single adults.\(^{43}\) This means that a local authority should first assess whether there would be a breach of human rights if no support was provided. Only if providing no support would amount to a human rights breach, should the local authority go on to assess community care needs.

(c) Establishing which local authority is territorially responsible. The test is whether a person is ‘ordinarily resident’ in the local authority area. Where someone has been transferred to a hospital or other authority for treatment territorial responsibility remains with the sending authority or the authority where they were ordinarily resident prior to treatment.

Assessment of Need

The duty to assess need arises under s.12A of the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968. The duty requires local authorities to first assess the need for community care services and then, having regard to the assessed needs, decide whether the needs call for provision by the local authority of such services. It is good practice to develop a single, shared needs assessment bringing together local authorities, health boards, NHS trusts and housing authorities.

As far as reasonable and practicable the views of the person being assessed should be considered as part of the needs assessment, as should the views of any carer who provides a substantial amount of care on a regular basis. Where it appears that care is required as a matter of urgency a local authority has the power to provide care services prior to assessment while an assessment of needs is being carried out.

Children

All children are covered by the Children (Scotland) Act 1995 regardless of immigration status. Local authorities should be mindful of their duties under children’s legislation and consider carrying out a child in need assessment.\textsuperscript{44} Such an assessment should be based on the needs of the child and on any potential risk to the child. Support provided to children may extend to their family where this safeguards or promotes a child’s welfare. However, some adult immigrants\textsuperscript{45} are excluded from support or services provided under s.22, 29 or 30 of the Children (Scotland) Act 1995 under schedule 3, Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002. In cases where a child’s carer is excluded from the Children (Scotland) Act local authorities should undertake a human rights assessment in conjunction with the child in need assessment.

Domestic Violence Rule

The Domestic Violence Rule (DVR) is a concession that reduces length of time a spouse/partner of a person with ILR or British citizenship has to wait (2 years) before becoming eligible to apply for ILR in circumstances of domestic abuse. Suffering domestic violence does not in any other case give rise to settlement status (ILR).

DVR and Spouses on a temporary visa

Rule 289 of the immigration rules makes an exception for a person who has come to the UK on a temporary spouse/partner visa where the relationship breaks down due to domestic violence. Under this ‘domestic violence rule’ the Secretary of State may grant ILR/ILE to a person who has been admitted to the UK for a period not exceeding 27 months or given an extension of stay for 2 years as the spouse/civil partner or unmarried partner (including same sex partner) of a person present and settled in the UK. This applies only where the relationship existed at the beginning of the period of leave and where a person is able to produce evidence that domestic violence has led to the permanent break down of that relationship before the period of leave has expired. To benefit from the rule an applicant must not have any unspent convictions within the meaning for the Rehabilitation of Offenders Act 1974.

A person who meets these criteria can be make an application to UKBA under the Domestic Violence Concession to access public funds while they make an application for indefinite leave to remain. Successful applicants will be granted access to public funds for three months which will then allow them to access income-related benefits and housing assistance. This arrangement replaces the Sojourner Project which operated until March 2012.

People on temporary spouse visas usually have NRPF. In this case there are no avenues to housing or benefits and access to support under social care provisions will require that a person has needs that do not arise solely from destitution. If a person on a temporary spouse visa fleeing domestic violence is caring for a child, that child will be able to access support and housing under the Children (Scotland) Act 1995 s.22. A person with limited leave as a spouse/partner will usually have permission to work and may be able to support themselves through employment. Local authorities should consider whether a person who has suffered domestic violence may qualify for support under s.12 of the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968 depending on the appearance of need.

EEA national

An EEA national who is in the UK as a dependant will need to be exercising his/her rights under the Communities Treaties in order to be able to stay in the UK and access benefits or LA support or services. The spouse/civil partner of an EEA national can retain the right to reside upon termination of the relationship. Usually such a person would have to have been in the relationship for at least three years and have spent at least one year of the relationship in the UK. However, an exception is made where ‘the continued right of residence in the UK is warranted by particularly difficult circumstances, such as he or another family member having been a victim of domestic violence while the marriage or civil partnership was subsisting.”

Workers/Students

People who have leave as workers or students and experience domestic violence continue to have those rights attached to their immigration status. They should be referred to agencies that support persons suffering domestic violence.

Spouses of Workers/Students

Dependants of a person on a temporary work or student visa do not qualify under DVR to apply for ILR. They would need to return to their country of origin and apply for entry clearance in their own right if they want to continue to live in the UK.

If relationship breakdown would put a person at risk on return to their country of origin this could form the basis of an asylum claim and needs to be referred to an immigration adviser.

Spouses of Asylum Seekers

If a dependant on asylum claim is suffering domestic violence the claims need to be separated and a claim needs to be made in the dependent’s own right. Where they are in receipt of asylum support the UKBA and accommodation provider should be informed of domestic violence and alternative support arrangements should be made.

Spouses of failed Asylum Seekers

Where a dependent of a failed asylum seeker is suffering domestic abuse the UKBA and accommodation provider should be informed so that alternative living arrangements can be made.

Where domestic abuse and relationship breakdown would put a person at risk on return to their country of origin they may need to make a claim for asylum in their own right. This will need to be referred to an immigration advisor. If the fresh claim is accepted by the UKBA then that person may qualify for asylum support rather than section 4 support.

Refugees and Humanitarian Protection

A refugee is someone whom the UKBA has recognised as a refugee under the 1951 Refugee Convention. The Refugee Convention obliges the UK to provide refugees with ‘the same treatment with respect to public relief and assistance as is accorded to their nationals’. So refugees are not affected by the public funds rules and can generally access the same benefits as nationals as long as they can meet the rules on entitlement that apply generally. They can also have some claims backdated to the date of their initial asylum claim.

A person with humanitarian protection (HP) is someone the UKBA recognises has fled serious human rights abuse, but who does not fit the legal definition of ‘refugee’. People with either HP have the same entitlements to benefits and services as refugees. But they are not allowed to backdate any claims to the date of the asylum claim.

Social Care

Refugee, and others with a protection status, are entitled to social care services on the same basis as UK nationals.

Benefits

Refugees, and others with a protection status, are entitled to the same benefits as British citizens provided they can meet the eligibility criteria.

Non means-tested benefits (e.g. child benefit) can be backdated to the date the claim for asylum was made as long as this is applied for within three months of notification of the grant of refugee status. Refugees studying English are a group entitled to Income Support as long as they are attending an English course for more than 15 hours a week and, on the date the course began, had been in the UK for 12 months or fewer.

Tax Credits

Refugees, and others with a protection status, are entitled to the same tax credits as British Citizens provided they can meet the eligibility criteria. Child tax credits can be backdated to the date of the asylum claim as long as this is applied for within three months of notification of the grant of refugee status.49

Tax Credits are administered by HMRC under the Tax Credits Act 2002. They are Working Tax Credits and Child Tax Credits.

Housing

Refugees, and others with a protection status, are not affected by the exclusions from housing allocation and homelessness assistance under the 1999 Immigration and Asylum Act. They are listed as one of the classes of persons exempt from s. 118 of the Act in the Persons Subject to Immigration Control (Housing Authority Accommodation and Homelessness) Order. Refugees can be given new tenancies and are exempt from any exclusions regarding assistance when homeless that can apply to other immigrant groups. This is the case for all recognised refugees regardless of whether their status is limited or indefinite.

In Scotland, unlike in England and Wales, accommodation provided to asylum seekers does not establish a local connection to the dispersal area. Consequently refugees are entitled to apply for housing or homelessness assistance in any local authority area in Scotland in the immediate period following the grant of refugee status.

Family

Refugees and those granted HP are entitled to be joined by their pre-existing family and may apply for family reunification following the grant of refugee status. In either case the family members of a recognised refugee have the same entitlements to benefits as a refugee and are not affected by the public funds rule.

Indefinite Leave to Remain

Someone who has Indefinite Leave to Remain (or Indefinite leave to enter) the UK has no conditions attached to their leave and can access benefits if eligible. Indefinite Leave to Remain (ILR) is sometimes called ‘settlement’.

Social Care

Immigrants with ILR or ILE have the same access to social care services as British citizens.

Benefits

A person with ILR or ILE has no restrictions attached in claiming public funds they are therefore entitled to claim benefits as long as they meet the eligibility criteria.

Where ILR or ILE has been granted on the undertaking that a sponsor would be responsible for maintenance a person may be restricted from claiming benefits and their sponsor will be liable to repay any benefits claimed.\(^\text{52}\) This restriction applies for five years from the date of the sponsorship undertaking or the date of entry. If the sponsor dies the restriction lapses and the person can access means-tested benefits.

Tax Credits

A person with ILR or ILE has no restrictions attached in claiming public funds. They are therefore entitled to tax credits provided they qualify.

However, where ILR or ILE has been granted on the undertaking that a sponsor would be responsible for maintenance then the sponsored person may be restricted from claiming benefits and the sponsor will be liable to repay any benefits claimed. This restriction applies for five years from the date of the sponsorship undertaking or the date of entry. If the sponsor dies, the restriction lapses.\(^\text{53}\)

Housing

A person with ILR or ILE is eligible for housing authority allocation and homelessness assistance if they are habitually resident in the common travel area.\(^\text{54}\) They are among the categories prescribed as exempt from the exclusions under sections 118 and 119 of the 1999 Immigration and Asylum Act.

There is no definition of ‘habitual residence’ in the immigration regulations. Case law has established that to be ‘habitually resident’ a person must have the right to reside and must be ‘resident for an appreciable period of time’.\(^\text{55}\) What amounts to an ‘appreciable period of time’ can vary greatly\(^\text{56}\) and the intention to make a home in the UK is key. A person who has lived in the UK for two years or more generally qualifies automatically as habitually resident, and a period of 3-6 months residence is usually seen as sufficient.

However, where a person has indefinite leave on the basis of a sponsorship agreement they are not entitled to assistance with housing or homelessness until five years after entry or after the undertaking. This restriction lapses if the sponsor has died.

Family

The partner of a person with ILR/ILE who is not an EEA national is usually given two years temporary leave and has the opportunity to apply for indefinite leave after that period. During the period of temporary leave such a partner would have permission to work and would be subject to the no recourse to public funds rule. Where the partner of a person with ILR/ILE is also an EEA national they may acquire the right to reside under the EU treaties (see section on EEA nationals).

If the relationship is terminated before an application for ILR has been made then the non-EEA national partner would be expected to return to their country of origin.

There is an exception in the immigration rules for those instances where a relationship ends due to domestic violence before the two year period of temporary leave has expired. Here the partner may be able to apply for indefinite leave under the domestic violence rule.\(^{57}\)

EEA Nationals

EEA nationals are nationals of the EU member states58 plus Norway, Liechtenstein, Iceland. Swiss nationals are not EEA nationals but have the same entitlements due to reciprocal agreements. Until 31 December 2013 transition arrangements apply to Bulgarian and Romanian nationals (A2 nationals) limiting their free movement to work in the UK. The entitlements of A2 nationals will be dealt with separately in the next section. Nationals of the eight Central and Eastern European countries that joined the EU in 2004 (previously called A8 nationals) had restrictions on their right to work in the UK. These restrictions ceased on 1 May 2011.

The rights of EU nationals to move and reside freely within the EU member states derive from EU Treaties and directives. They have been codified in EU directive 2004/38. In the UK this directive has been implemented by the Immigration (European Economic Area) Regulations 2006, No 1003.59 For the sake of simplicity this guidance confines itself to the UK regulations and treats the ‘right to reside’ in the EEA Regulations as a proxy for EU treaty rights. However, users of this guidance should be aware that there remains a large and contested body of law that may impact on EEA nationals’ rights and should seek legal advice on specific issues as necessary.

EEA nationals are not ‘persons subject to immigration control’ as long as they have a ‘right to reside’.60 EEA nationals have an initial right to reside in the UK for three months. This derives from their right as EU Citizens to ‘move and reside freely within the territory of the Member States’. EEA nationals can also have an extended right to reside. The extended right to reside depends on them being a ‘qualified person’.

A ‘qualified person’ is an EEA national who is in the UK and is:

- a jobseeker;
- a worker;
- a self-employed person;
- a self-sufficient person; or
- a student.61

An EEA national who is a qualified person can reside in the UK for as long as they remain a qualified person.62 After residing lawfully in the UK for five years continuously, an EEA national acquires a permanent right to reside in the UK. An EEA national can also acquire permanent residence on 58 The current member states of the EU are: Austria, Belgium, Bulgaria, Cyprus, the Czech Republic, Denmark, Estonia, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Ireland, Italy, Latvia, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, the Netherlands, Poland, Portugal, Romania, Slovenia, Slovakia, Spain, Sweden and the UK.

59 These Regulations apply the EU Directive to EEA nationals in the UK and not only EU nationals. However it should be noted that for non-EU EEA nationals the rights derive from the Regulation, whereas for EU nationals the rights derive from the Directive itself.

becoming a ‘worker or self-employed person who has ceased activity’. Once acquired, permanent residence can only be lost following a period of absence from the UK of over two consecutive years or if the UKBA authorises a person’s removal on serious grounds of public policy or public security.

The entitlements of EEA nationals in the UK depend mainly on their right to reside. At present UK regulations exclude EEA nationals from income-related benefits if their only right to reside is the initial right to reside EU citizen under regulation 13. If an EEA national has no right to reside then they are not exercising their Community treaty rights and their presence in the UK becomes ‘subject to immigration control’. Secondary legislation has introduced a right to reside test. This affects entitlements to benefit and housing eligibility excluding those who have only an initial right to reside and, in some instances, excluding those whose extended right to reside is as a jobseeker only.

Social Care

Local authorities are the key deliverers of social care in Scotland. The Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968 and the Mental Health (Care and Treatment) (Scotland) Act 2003 are the central statutes setting out the powers and duties of Scottish Local Authorities.

EEA nationals can access support under section 12 (general social welfare services of local authorities) and section 13A (provision of residential accommodation with nursing) of the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968 as long as they have a right of residence. Schedule 3 of the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002 excludes EEA nationals from support under section 12 and 13A of the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968 (inter alia), unless to do so would breach their rights under the Communities treaties. Note that children are exempt from schedule 3 of the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002.

In addition to Schedule 3, the 1999 Immigration and Asylum Act excludes ‘persons subject to immigration control’ from section 13B (provision of care and after-care) of the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968 and from sections 25 to 27 of the Mental Health (Care and Treatment) (Scotland) Act 2003 unless:

“his need for assistance has arisen solely—(a) because he is destitute; or (b) because of the physical effects, or anticipated physical effects, of his being destitute.”

66 Regs 13, 14 & 15 Immigration (EEA) Regulations 2006
It is not clear whether any EEA national would be excluded from social care under the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 as the definition of ‘person subject to immigration control’ excludes EEA nationals from the outset. Section 120 adopts the definition of a ‘person subject to immigration control’ from s.115(9) as:

“A person subject to immigration control” means a person who is not a national of an EEA state and who-

(a) Requires leave to enter or remain in the UK but does not have it;

(b) Has leave to enter or remain in the UK which is subject to a condition that he does not have recourse to public funds;

(c) Has leave to enter or remain in the UK given as a result of a maintenance undertaking; or

(d) Has leave to enter or remain in the UK only as a result of paragraph 17 of Schedule 4

However, case law on the issue of whether EEA nationals can be ‘persons subject to immigration control’ adopts a different conclusion in that EEA nationals can be persons subject to immigration control if they are not exercising community rights.\(^{67}\) In other words an EEA national needs to have a right of residence under regulations 13, 14 or 15 of the Immigration (EEA) Regulations 2006. Following the case law EEA nationals can only access services under section 13B of the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968 or under sections 25 to 27 of the Mental Health (Care and Treatment) (Scotland) Act 2003 if they have a right of residence or if their need does not stem from destitution alone. Following the statute definition of ‘persons subject to immigration control’ in s.115, however, any EEA national would be able to access these particular social care provisions.\(^{68}\)

Children of EEA nationals are covered by the Children (Scotland) Act 1995. Local authorities should consider whether a child in need\(^{69}\) assessment should be carried out.\(^{70}\)

Benefits\(^{71}\)

EEA nationals with the right to reside are not ‘persons subject to immigration control’ and as such are not subject to the no recourse to public funds rule.\(^{72}\) However, UK regulations also exclude EEA nationals with only an initial right to reside as an EU citizen from benefits. Consequently economically inactive EEA nationals do not generally have entitlements to income-related benefits.

\(^{70}\) Adult EEA nationals with no right of residence are excluded from s.22, 29 & 30 C(S)A 1995 by scheduled 3, NIAA 2002. This exclusion does not affect children.

\(^{71}\) This guidance does not cover contributory benefits.

\(^{72}\) Mayor & Burgesses of the LB Barnet v Hassan Ismail, Ms Nimco Abdi and First Secretary of State [2006] EWCA Civ 383
To access income-related benefits an EEA national needs to pass the right to reside test. For IS, HB and CTB a person must be habitually resident in the CTA. For these benefits a person will not be habitually resident if their only right to reside is an initial right to reside or if their extended right to reside is as a jobseeker or as the family member of a jobseeker. Therefore to claim these benefits an EEA national needs to be in employment, self-employment, self-sufficient or a student. In the case of income-based JSA having a right to reside as a job seeker is sufficient or family member of a jobseeker is sufficient, but having only an initial right to reside is insufficient. However, claiming income based JSA can allow a person to be passported onto HB and CTB even though, as a work seeker, they would not otherwise meet the right to reside test for these benefits.

For child benefit, DLA, CA and AA the test is ‘ordinary residence’ and the claimant must be present in the UK at the time of the claim.

Other benefits do not apply a right to reside test as the entitlement springs from the EU coordination rules that try to ensure non-discrimination between different EU nationals exercising mobility rights within the EU. To access these benefits EEA nationals need to meet the same eligibility requirements as British Citizens. In assessing contributions, social security contributions made in other EU member states should be counted alongside National Insurance contributions.

Tax Credits

There are Working Tax Credits and Child Tax Credits. EEA nationals are entitled to claim tax credits subject to residence and eligibility requirements. In general the residency requirement is that a person be living in the UK. This is not affected by short absences for holidays or business trips. In some circumstances tax credits may be claimed even where a person (or a child on whose behalf a claim is being made) is not living in the UK.

Housing

EEA nationals may be excluded from housing allocation and homelessness assistance when they do not have a right to reside in the UK, as they then become ‘persons subject to immigration control’. The Immigration Asylum Act 1999 excludes a ‘person subject to immigration control’ from housing authority accommodation (s. 118) and homelessness accommodation or assistance (s. 119) unless he is of a class specified in an order by the UKBA. The definition adopted in sections 118 and 119 of ‘person subject to immigration control’ is: a \text{person who under the 1971 Act requires leave to enter or remain in the UK (whether or not such leave has been given).}

The Immigration (EEA) Regulations 2006 stipulate:

\text{In accordance with section 7 of the Immigration Act 1988(1), a person who is admitted to or acquires a right to reside in the United Kingdom under these Regulations shall not require leave to remain in the United Kingdom under the 1971 Act during any period in which he has a right to reside under these Regulations but such a person shall require leave to remain under the 1971 Act during any period in which he does not have such a right.}^{83}

In other words once an EEA national does not have a right to reside under the 2006 Immigration (EEA) Regulations they require leave to remain and as such are persons subject to immigration control.

The Scottish Government’s Code of Guidance on Homelessness\(^84\) treated all EEA nationals as eligible for homelessness assistance. This position has been superseded by legislative developments\(^85\) and entitlements to housing and homelessness assistance are restricted to EEA nationals with a right to reside.

Secondary legislation in England goes further in restricting the access of EEA nationals to housing allocation and homelessness assistance. The Allocation of Housing and Homelessness (eligibility) (England) Regulations 2006\(^86\) excludes those EEA nationals with an initial 3 month right to reside or with an extended right to reside as a jobseeker from housing accommodation and assistance. In Scotland these groups would continue to be eligible, yet they would not be directly entitled to income-related benefits apart from income related JSA. This would mean these EEA nationals would not be receiving housing benefit or council tax benefit\(^87\) even though they would be eligible housing and homelessness assistance.

In cases where EEA nationals are not eligible for housing or homelessness assistance local authorities need to consider their duties towards any children. Children of EEA nationals are covered by the Children (Scotland) Act 1995. Local authorities should consider whether a child in need\(^88\) assessment should be carried out. Support provided under children’s legislation may include the provision of accommodation.\(^9\)

Family

The right of residence enjoyed by EEA nationals extends to family members accompanying them. Family members are defined in the Immigration (EEA) Regulations. They include a person’s spouse or civil partner, children under 21 (or over 21 if still dependent), children of the spouse or partner under 21 (or over 21 if dependent), parents or grandparents. For EEA nationals who are students the definition of family members is more narrow and includes only children or spouses. There are circumstances in which other dependants can be recognised as family members - these are set out in regulation 8 of the Immigration (EEA) Regulations.\(^90\) These rights apply whether or not the family member is an EEA national. This means that the family of an EEA national have the same rights to benefits and services as EEA nationals, even if they are not themselves EEA nationals.

A non-EEA spouse of an EEA national who was a qualified person may retain a right of residence upon the death of that person or on the termination of their marriage in certain conditions, but only if they are in such a situation as would make them a worker or a self-employed or self-sufficient person.\(^91\) The EU Directive provides for an EU national’s family member to retain an extended right to reside where a spouse dies or a marriage is terminated. However in this case the EU national’s family member must become a worker, a self-employed person or self-sufficient before acquiring permanent residence.\(^92\)

Children of a worker or former worker who have embarked on a course of education also have a right to reside in the UK as long as they are continuing their education.\(^93\) This right of residence is retained in situations where the qualified person has died or left the UK. There is case law that extends this right to reside to the person with custody of the child.\(^94\) Family members who retain a right of residence have the same access to benefits and services as do EEA nationals with an extended right to residence.

In cases where children are involved local authorities should be mindful of their duties under the Children (Scotland) Act 1995. Support provided to children may extend to their family members. However, adult EEA nationals are excluded from support under s.22, 29 and 30 of the Children (Scotland) Act 1995 if they have no right of residence.

A2 Nationals

Under the Treaty of Accession, nationals from Romania and Bulgaria (A2 nationals) are members of the European Union, but their rights to access the UK’s labour market are restricted. Accession rules restrict the types of employment A2 nationals can undertake during the accession period. The accession period runs to 31 December 2013.

An A2 national has the same right as any other EEA national to enter and move freely in the UK. This means they have an initial right to reside within the UK for 3 months as an EU citizen, during which time they must not become an unreasonable burden on the state. Following this 3 month period they can extend their right to remain in the UK if they can show that they are exercising an EU Treaty Right either as a self-employed person, a student or a self-sufficient person (who is not economically active). A2 nationals cannot have the right to reside as a jobseeker.

An A2 national must have worker authorisation before they can work legally in the UK, unless they are exempt from the worker authorisation scheme, or they are classed as a Highly Skilled Migrant under the previous government work permit programme. Those workers with worker authorisation should be issued with an accession worker card relevant only to the employer and employment that they are undertaking.

Exemptions from the Worker Authorisation Scheme

- A2 nationals who had leave to enter or remain in the UK under the 1971 Immigration Act on 30 December 2006 and were not subject to any conditions restricting employment at that time.
- A2 nationals who had been working legally in the UK for 12 months continuously without breaks of 30 days ending on or after 31 December 2006.
- A2 nationals who are the spouse of an EEA national or British Citizen.
- A2 nationals who are highly skilled and are in possession of a registration certificate confirming that they have unrestricted access to the labour market.
- A2 nationals who are students and work less than 20 hours per week (during term time) and have a registration certificate that restricts their right to employment.
- A2 nationals who have worked for 12 months continuously or more legally in the UK and have a registration certificate giving unrestricted access to the labour market.
- A2 nationals who have a permanent right of residence (legally resided in the UK, in accordance with any provisions, for a continuous period of five years).

Social Care

Local Authorities are the key deliverers of social care in Scotland. The Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968 and the Mental Health (Care and Treatment) (Scotland) Act 1984 are the central statutes setting out the powers and duties of Scottish Local Authorities. Immigration law excludes some immigrant groups from social care. In determining whether A2 nationals are eligible for support under social care...

care provisions you need to determine what EU treaty rights are engaged by their presence in the UK. After the initial 3 month right to reside as an EU citizen, an A2 national can have the right to reside only as a self-employed person, a self-sufficient person or as a student, unless they are exempt from the worker authorisation scheme. In these instances an A2 national should be treated like any other EU national (refer to EEA nationals section). This means that they may be eligible for social care services.

A2 nationals who are exercising their rights as an EU citizen, a student, a self-sufficient person or as self-employed have the same entitlements as other EEA nationals in the same situation (see section on EEA nationals). A2 nationals who are exempt from worker authorisation have the same rights as other EEA nationals in the same situation (see section on EEA nationals). A2 nationals who have to be authorised to work in the UK acquire the same rights as other EEA nationals after 12 months of continuous authorised employment, where they have a registration certificate, at which point they gain the extended right to reside as a ‘worker’. Where an A2 national is in authorised work or exempt from the scheme has an accident or is unable to work due to illness they may be able to continue to be treated as “worker” and may be able to access appropriate benefits.

A2 nationals complying with the worker authorisation scheme would have the same eligibility to social care provisions as other EEA nationals but these would cease if such a person is made unemployed. Unlike other EEA nationals, where an A2 national loses their authorised work place, they lose their right to reside and access to the majority of means-tested benefits, unless they can satisfy another Treaty Right. There is no provision for an A2 person who requires worker authorisation to remain in the UK legitimately as a jobseeker if their employment is terminated. Where an A2 national takes up employment without obtaining authorisation they may be committing a criminal offence.

Where an A2 national requires social care services and this need has not arisen solely due to destitution or the physical effects, or anticipated physical effects, of destitution they may qualify as a ‘person in need requiring assistance’ and be able to access social care support regardless of whether they have a right to reside.

Children of EEA nationals are covered by the Children (Scotland) Act 1995. Local authorities should consider whether a child in need assessment should be carried out.

Benefits

Where an A2 national is in the UK under the worker authorisation scheme, or exempt from the scheme, they are entitled to claim in-work benefits such as Housing Benefit, Council Tax Benefit, Working Tax Credit and Child Benefit as long as they remain in their authorised employment.

An A2 national who completes 12 months of continuous authorised employment is issued with a registration certificate and gains free access to the UK labour market and can claim benefits freely. If an A2 national subject to worker authorisation loses their authorised job before 12 months have elapsed, they lose their right to reside and cannot access the range of means-tested benefits.

Tax Credits
Where an A2 national is in the UK under the worker authorisation scheme, or exempt from the scheme, they are entitled to claim working tax and child tax credits for as long as they remain in their authorised employment.

If an A2 national subject to worker authorisation loses their authorised work before 12 months of continuous employment have elapsed they lose their entitlement to claim tax credits.

Housing
Where an A2 national is in the UK under the worker authorisation scheme or exempt from the scheme, they are entitled to access homelessness assistance and local authority housing allocation on the same basis as other EEA nationals. In these instances see EEA nationals housing section to explain issues regarding eligibility in Scotland.

An A2 national who completes 12 months of continuous authorised employment is issued with a registration certificate and gains access to the UK labour market and therefore has the same eligibility for housing allocation and homelessness assistance as other EEA nationals.

Children of EEA nationals are covered by the Children (Scotland) Act 1995. Local authorities should consider whether a child in need assessment should be carried out. Support provided under children’s legislation may include the provision of accommodation.

Family
Regulation 7 of the Immigration (EEA) Regulations 2006 defines who is a family member of an A2 national not subject to worker authorisation. Such family members are entitled to apply for a registration certificate or a residence card under Regs 16 and 17 of the same regulations.

The family members of an A2 national subject to worker authorisation are known as ‘authorised family members’. Authorised family members are defined in reg 3 of the Accession (Worker Authorisation and Worker Registration)(Amendment) Regulations.

Where there are children local authorities should be mindful of their duties under the Children (Scotland) Act 1995. Support provided to children may extend to their family members. However, adult EEA nationals are excluded from support under s.22, 29 and 30 of the Children (Scotland) Act 1995 if they have no right of residence.

Workers

People who come to the UK to work do so either under the points based system or through one of the remaining work permit categories. The rules regarding renewal of visas, access to settlement and ability to change employer vary, but in general all immigrants who come to the UK from outside the EEA to work are persons subject to immigration control and usually have no recourse to public funds. The terms of their leave will be stated on their visa.

Social Care

Third Country Nationals who come to the UK on a work visa are excluded from social care provision unless their need for assistance has arisen for reasons other than destitution. Section 120 of the Immigration and Asylum Act restricts the access of ‘persons subject to immigration control’ to services under s.12, s13A and 13B of the Social Work (Scotland) Act and sections 25 to 27 of the Mental Health(Scotland) Act 2003 allowing support only where their need for assistance has not ‘arisen solely – (a) because he is destitute; or (b) because of the physical effects, or anticipated physical effects, of his being destitute.’

Consequently people on a work visa are generally excluded from social care unless they are ‘a person in need requiring assistance’ (i.e their needs arise apart from destitution or the anticipated effects of destitution).

Children of TCN immigrant workers are covered by the Children (Scotland) Act 1995. Local authorities should consider whether a child in need assessment should be carried out. Support provided under children’s legislation can extend to support for the child’s family.

Benefits

Third Country Nationals on a work visa usually have no recourse to public funds as a condition of their leave. They are also a group to whom section 115 of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 applies. Section 115 excludes this group from income-related benefits.

There are some exceptions. Access to income-based JSA, income support, social fund payments, housing benefit and council tax benefit can occur if:

- a person is temporarily without funds due to a disruption in remittances from abroad, provided there is a reasonable expectation that funds will resume;
- a person has leave on a maintenance undertaking and the sponsor dies;

- a person has leave under a maintenance agreement and five years have passed since entry or the undertaking (whichever is the later); or
- a person is a national of a state that has ratified the ECSMA or the CESC. 109\textsuperscript{110}

Furthermore, the EU has entered into co-operation and association agreements with third countries that contain provisions for equal treatment in matters of social security. On this basis, nationals of Algeria, Israel, Morocco, San Marino, Tunisia and Turkey and their families are entitled to access a range of benefits\textsuperscript{111} provided they are working lawfully in the UK.

Tax Credits

As persons ‘subject to immigration control’ third country national on a work visa are not generally entitled to child tax credit or working tax credits. Exceptions may apply to the following: \textsuperscript{112}

- those subject to a maintenance undertaking who have been resident in the UK for 5 years;
- those subject to a maintenance undertaking whose sponsor has died;
- those whose funds from abroad have been temporarily disrupted;
- those who are nationals of states covered by European Convention of Social and Medical Assistance or the Council of Europe Social Charter and are lawfully in the UK; or
- those workers from states with which the EC has an agreement for equal treatment for social security. \textsuperscript{113}

Housing

Third Country Nationals who are in the UK for work purposes are not eligible for housing allocation or homelessness assistance.\textsuperscript{114} They are also excluded from housing benefit as persons subject to immigration control.\textsuperscript{115}

The 1999 Immigration and Asylum Act permits certain categories of immigrants to be exempted from this overall exclusion, some of those exempted could be in the UK for work reasons. These include:

- sponsored immigrants whose sponsor has died; and

\textit{Family}

If a person has come to the UK to accompany a worker from outside the EEA and that person is not an EEA national then they are a person subject to immigration control and are likely to have leave subject to no recourse to public funds.

If a person who has come to the UK to accompany a worker from outside the EEA, but is an EEA national they may be able to access benefits and welfare services as an EEA national.

Should the relationship be terminated then a person from outside the EEA will need to return to their country of origin to apply for entry clearance, unless they have grounds for an asylum or ECHR claim. The partner of a person who is on a temporary work visa cannot benefit from the domestic violence rule as this applies to the partners of people with settlement status (ILR) with British citizenship.

Where there are children local authorities should be mindful of their duties under the Children (Scotland) Act 1995.

\textsuperscript{117} S. 22 C(S)A 1995
Students

A person who visits the UK to study from outside the EEA usually has a student visa under the old immigration rules (until 29 March 2009) or has come in as a student under tier four of the points based system. There are some shorter visas available for people coming to study on short courses (student visitor visas) or coming to finalise arrangements for their studies. Students are given leave to enter or remain subject to restrictions on working hours and on the condition that they have no recourse to public funds. The general terms of their leave will be stated on their visa.

Social Care

Third Country Nationals who are in the UK to study are excluded from social care provision under section 120 of the 1999 Immigration and Asylum Act as ‘persons subject to immigration control’. The Act restricts access to services under s.12, s13A and 13B of the Social Work (Scotland) Act and sections 25 to 27 of the Mental Health (Care and Treatment)(Scotland) Act 2003. It allows support only where the need for assistance has not ‘arisen solely – (a) because he is destitute; or (b) because of the physical effects, or anticipated physical effects, of his being destitute.’

TCNs on a student visa are generally excluded from social care unless they are in a situation that amounts to being ‘person in need requiring assistance’.

Children of TCN students are covered by the Children (Scotland) Act 1995. Local authorities should consider whether a child in need assessment should be carried out. Support provided under children’s legislation can extend to support for the child’s family.

Benefits

TCNs who are in the UK to study usually have ‘no recourse to public funds’. They are ‘persons subject to immigration control and as such s.115 Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 applies. This section excludes them from income-related benefits.

Section 115 allows for exceptions to be made for prescribed categories. Secondary legislation allows for TCN students to access to income-based JSA, income support, social fund payments, housing benefit and council tax benefit if:

- they are temporarily without funds due to a disruption in remittances from abroad, provided there is a reasonable expectation that funds will resume;
- a person has leave on a maintenance undertaking and the sponsor dies;

Third Country Nationals who are in the UK to study have no rights to access local authority housing\textsuperscript{127}, assistance with homelessness or housing benefit. The 1999 Immigration and Asylum Act excludes ‘persons subject to immigration control’ from housing allocation under s.118, homelessness assistance under section 119 and housing benefit under s.115.

There may be some exceptions where students fall into categories prescribed as exempt. These include:

Establishing Migrants’ Access to Benefits and Local Authority Services

Partners with temporary leave\textsuperscript{130}

Persons may enter the UK to join or accompany their spouse or partner. They will usually be granted limited leave without recourse to public funds. The general conditions of entry will be stated on the visa.

Social Care

Third Country Nationals who come to the UK as a spouse or partner would be persons subject to immigration control. Section 120 of the Immigration and Asylum Act restricts their access to services under s.12, s13A and 13B of the Social Work (Scotland) Act and sections 25 to 27 of the Mental Health (Care and Treatment)(Scotland) Act 2003 allowing support only where their need for assistance has not ‘arisen solely – (a) because he is destitute; or (b) because of the physical effects, or anticipated physical effects, of his being destitute.’\textsuperscript{131} Consequently a person on a spouse visa cannot access social care provisions unless they are a ‘person in need requiring assistance’.\textsuperscript{132}

The children of immigrants are covered by the Children (Scotland) Act 1995. Local authorities should consider whether a child in need\textsuperscript{133} assessment should be carried out. Support provided under children’s legislation can extend to support for the child’s parent.

Benefits\textsuperscript{134}

Third country nationals who are in the UK for family reasons are persons subject to immigration control. Therefore section 115 of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999 applies. This section excludes them from income related benefits.\textsuperscript{135}

There are some exceptions. Access to income based JSA, income support, social fund payments, housing benefit and council tax benefit can occur if\textsuperscript{136}:

Asylum Seekers

An asylum seeker is a person who has made a claim for protection under the 1951 Refugee Convention and/or Article 3 of the ECHR. Asylum seekers are given support outside the mainstream benefits system. A person continues to be supported as an asylum seeker for 28 days after their claim is determined if any leave is granted. They can also continue to be supported as an asylum seeker if (a) they come to the end of their claim having exhausted all appeal rights, but the main applicant has dependent children under the age of 18 or (b) their claim is refused but they have outstanding appeal rights in the UK. UKBA support will be terminated after 21 days following the applicant becoming appeal rights exhausted if there are no dependent children under the age of 18. They then may be eligible for Section 4 support administered by UKBA (see next section on failed asylum seekers).

Since April 2008 support for asylum seekers is provided by the UKBA. The UKBA took over this function from the Borders and Immigration Agency which replaced National Asylum Seeker Support Service (NASS) in April 2006. NASS provided asylum seeker support since a separate system of support was established in 1996 and asylum seeker support is often still referred to as ‘NASS support’. An asylum seeker is entitled to asylum support if they are destitute or likely to become destitute and (for those who have claimed asylum after 8 January 2003) they have made their claim ‘as soon as reasonably practicable’.

Asylum support can be withdrawn from asylum seekers who claimed asylum in-country rather than at the port of entry where the UKBA deems the asylum application was not lodged ‘as soon as reasonably practicable’. There is no legal definition of ‘as soon as reasonably practical’ but UKBA policy states that a claim made within three days of entry should be treated as having been made ‘as soon as reasonably practicable’. Where support has been withheld, the lack of support must not amount to a human rights breach under the ECHR. Support will not be withheld from in-country applicants where there are dependent children under 18.

An asylum seeker whose claim was refused and who has subsequently had fresh representations for an asylum claim accepted for consideration by the UKBA becomes an asylum seeker again and as such may receive asylum support if eligible. Similarly, where a failed asylum seeker has been granted leave to appeal following the submission of an out-of-time appeal, they become an asylum seeker again and may be eligible for asylum support.

EEA nationals and their dependants are a class of persons prescribed by schedule 3 Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act as ineligible for asylum support under sections 4, 95 & 98 Immigration 147 A person who has made a claim under other articles of the ECHR (e.g. Art. 8) is not an asylum seeker.

148 Under s.95 (3) IAA1999 a person is destitute if: ‘(a) he does not have adequate accommodation or any means of obtaining it (whether or not his essential living needs are met); or (b) he has adequate accommodation or the means of obtaining it, but cannot meet other essential living needs.’ A person is regarded as destitute upon applying for asylum support if destitution is likely with 14 days and continues to be regarded as destitute if destitution is likely within 56 days.

and Asylum Act 1999, except to the extent necessary to prevent a breach of rights under the ECHR or the Communities Treaties. The onus is on the applicant to show a breach would be committed. An EEA national who applies for asylum would be allowed to work under the Communities Treaties. A2 nationals would have their access to the labour market restricted (see A2 section).150

Where an asylum seeker has a dependent who is under 18, they will continue to be supported under asylum support until the child turns 18 as long as they remain in the UK. This only applies for dependents present during the time of the asylum claim, not any children born following refusal.151

For the purposes of asylum support an asylum seeker has to be over 18. If a person under the age of 18 has made a claim for asylum they should be supported by the local authority, not UKBA. (see section on UASCs).

Social Care

As persons subject to immigration control asylum seekers are excluded from social care provision unless their need for care arises for reasons other than destitution. The 1999 Immigration and Asylum Act restricts asylum seeker’s access to services under s.12, s13A and 13B of the Social Work (Scotland) Act and sections 25 to 27 of the Mental Health (Care and Treatment)(Scotland) Act 2003 allowing support only where their need for assistance has not ‘arisen solely – (a) because he is destitute; or (b) because of the physical effects, or anticipated physical effects, of his being destitute.’152

Where a social care need arises for reasons other than destitution the local authority becomes responsible for providing accommodation and support services.153 The local authority should inform the UKBA of the care need so the UKBA can make arrangements to stop providing support. Where a parent has an assessed care need the local authority should provide accommodation adequate for the whole family and the UKBA will make a contribution to cover the accommodation and subsistence needs for the other family members.154 Where a dependent child has an assessed care need the UKBA remains responsible for providing support. However, the local authority should assess under the Children (Scotland) Act 1995 whether any additional care support is needed and should provide that support if necessary.155

Benefits

Asylum seekers are supported outside the mainstream benefits system. They are given asylum support, often called NASS support. This is administered by the UKBA. Asylum seekers are not entitled to any other benefits.156

Children under 18 seeking asylum are provided for by local authorities under children legislation (see UASC section)

If an asylum seeker is granted refugee status they can receive back-dated non means tested benefits such as child benefit from the date of their initial asylum claim. This must be applied for within three months of the grant of refugee status.

Tax Credits

As ‘persons subject to immigration control’ asylum seekers are not entitled to tax credits.157

If an asylum seeker is granted refugee status they can receive back dated non means tested benefits. This must be applied for within three months of the grant of refugee status.

Housing

Accommodation for asylum seekers is provided by the UKBA as part of asylum support under s.95 and 96 of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999. To qualify for support an asylum seeker must be destitute or facing destitution. The accommodation provided by the UKBA can include accommodation centres.158 The UKBA usually grants temporary asylum support while an application for asylum support is being considered.159 This is called ‘emergency support’. The UKBA has the power to discontinue or suspend asylum support.160

Local authorities may have a role in providing accommodation under s.95 Immigration and Asylum Act where the UKBA requests their assistance under s 99 and 100 Immigration and Asylum Act. It is important to realise that in this instance the local authority is not housing asylum seekers under their own duties but assisting the UKBA in exercising its powers.

Under the 2002 Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act the UKBA may exclude in-country asylum applicants from asylum support (including accommodation) if they are not satisfied that a claim for 156 The exception is asylum seekers without funds whose claims were made before the 5 February 1996 received income support at the urgent cases rate of 90 per cent and housing benefit. Cases without a decision from pre-1996 are now very rare.

157 There are exceptions and transitional rules apply for asylum seekers who claimed asylum before 5 February 1996 and asylum seekers who claimed asylum before 3 April 2000. See Tax Credits (Immigration) Regulations 2003, No 653 asylum was made ‘as soon as reasonably practicable’.\textsuperscript{161} According to s.55 (3) and (4) Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act a local authority cannot in these circumstances offer such persons accommodation.

The UKBA will not exclude dependent children under 18 from asylum support. Where an asylum seeker has a dependent who is under 18 they continue to be supported under asylum support until the child turns 18 while they remain in the UK. This means they also continue to be housed under asylum support.

Local authorities may provide accommodation for asylum seekers as part of meeting a social care need.\textsuperscript{162}

\textit{Family}

Dependants of an asylum seeker are entitled to asylum support and temporary asylum support as long as they are destitute. A dependent is defined as a spouse, a child or a spouse’s child under 18, a child of close family, a child living as part of a household and a partner living with him as part of a household for at least two of the three years prior to the asylum claim.\textsuperscript{163} Where a dependant on an asylum claim has a claim to asylum in their own right this should be made at the earliest opportunity. Refer to an immigration advisor.

Asylum seekers with dependent children cannot be excluded from asylum support on the basis of not having claimed asylum ‘as soon as reasonably practicable’.

Where asylum seekers have been excluded from UKBA support they may be able to get social services support under Children (Scotland) Act 1995. Social services only has duty to provide for the child, but this may require supporting the parents where this is in best interests of child or to prevent a breach of article 8 rights in relation to the child.

Failed Asylum Seekers

A failed asylum seeker is a person who has come to the end of their asylum claim and has not been granted any leave to remain and has no further in-country right of appeal. Failed asylum seekers are not generally entitled to support from the UKBA and are expected to return to their country of origin. In some circumstances they may be able to claim support under section 4 of the Immigration and Asylum Act 1999. This is known as section 4 support or ‘hard cases support’. Section 4 support consists of accommodation and vouchers only, with no cash support.

If section 4 support is applied for within 21 days of asylum support ending the UKBA will accept the applicant is destitute. However, if a person in not in receipt of UKBA support at the time when their asylum case comes to an end they must provide evidence of why they are no longer able to support themselves. To qualify for section 4 support a person must: be destitute and meet one of the five criteria for support or be applying for accommodation to support an application for bail or release from immigration detention.

To be eligible for section 4 support a person must meet one of the following five criteria:

- be taking all reasonable steps to leave the UK;
- be unable to leave the UK because of illness or a disability;
- be unable to leave the UK because there is no viable route for return;
- have applied for Judicial Review;
- be in a situation where support is necessary to prevent a human rights breach.

A person whose initial asylum claim has been refused and who has made fresh representations or lodged an out-of-time appeal to the first tier tribunal is a failed asylum seeker and can apply for support under section 4 while waiting to see whether the UKBA or the courts are willing to consider further arguments. If the UKBA accepts the fresh representations amount to a fresh claim, or the tribunal gives permission to hear an out-of-time appeal then that person becomes an asylum seeker again and should claim asylum support under s. 95. If it is decided that the fresh representations do not amount to a fresh asylum claim or leave to appeal is denied then section 4 support will be reviewed and may be discontinued unless one of the five criteria for support applies.

164 This guidance document adopts the term ‘failed asylum seekers’ throughout as it is the terminology found in statute and UKBA briefings. No pejorative meaning is intended in the word ‘failed’
165 S 95(3) IAA 1999 defines destitute as not having adequate accommodation or any means of getting it or not being able to meet essential living needs (even if you do have adequate accommodation). A person who is likely to become destitute within 14 days counts as destitute
166 Reg 3 The Immigration and Asylum (Provision of Accommodation for Failed Asylum Seekers) Regulations 2005, No 930
167 By this, it is meant an inability to travel and not that HR would be breached by a lack of medical treatment in country of destination
168 In Scotland all that is necessary is for a JR application to have been lodged at court
169 For instance: (a) fresh representations have been lodged with the UKBA; (b) an out of time appeal has been made to the first tier tribunal; (c) there is no safe route of return; or (d) other human rights arguments.
Section 4 support is continually reviewed. The UKBA will issue letters notifying the withdrawal of support within 21 days, these must be responded to with reasons why support needs to continue if circumstances allowing for section 4 support persist. Section 4 support can be withdrawn if the recipient does not comply with conditions of support as stipulated (e.g. reporting requirements, residence requirements, compliance with removal preparations).

Social Care

Failed asylum seekers are a class excluded from support or assistance under schedule 3 of the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002. This excludes failed asylum seekers from s.12 and s.13A Social Work (Scotland) Act if they fail to comply with removal directions. Where a failed asylum seeker applied for asylum in-country they are an illegal entrant and as such will be excluded under schedule 3 even if they are complying with removal. However, the exclusion of support should not breach of rights under the ECHR. Local authorities may need to carry out a human rights assessment to ensure they are not in breach of their obligations under the Human Rights Act 1998.

There are some remaining elements of social care provision in Scotland not covered by Schedule 3, Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002. These are services under 13B of the Social Work (Scotland) Act and sections 25 to 27 of the Mental Health (Care and Treatment) (Scotland) Act 2003. The 1999 Immigration and Asylum Act excludes failed asylum seekers from these services unless their need has not ‘arisen solely – (a) because he is destitute; or (b) because of the physical effects, or anticipated physical effects, of his being destitute.’ In these instances a failed asylum seeker would qualify as a ‘person in need requiring assistance’ and be able to access support under those particular sections.

Local authorities should be aware that immigrant children are covered by the Children (Scotland) Act 1995 and consider whether a child in need assessment should be carried out.

Benefits

Failed asylum seekers are not entitled to benefits. As asylum seekers they may have qualified for asylum support, which is support outside the mainstream benefits system. This ends after a claim has been determined and there is no further in-country right of appeal. Some failed asylum seekers may be eligible for section 4 support which is also administered by UKBA (see above).

Tax Credits

Failed asylum seekers are not entitled to tax credits. There are some limited exceptions to this rule including transitional rules that apply to asylum seekers with claims predating 3 April 2000. However, the transitional rules cease to apply following a UKBA decision on the claim, even if this decision is being appealed.

Housing

Failed asylum seekers are not eligible for housing or homelessness assistance under the Housing (Scotland) Act 1987. A failed asylum seeker may be accommodated as part of ‘hard case support’ under section 4. To be eligible for this asylum seekers must be destitute and meet one of the five criteria for support (see opening section on failed asylum seekers). Where a failed asylum seeker has a social care need local authorities should consider whether the need is such that he may be provided with accommodation under the Social Work (S) Act 1968.

Where a failed asylum seeker has dependent children under 18, asylum support is not terminated until they leave the UK or are granted another form of status. This does not apply to children born after an asylum claim was exhausted. All children are covered by the Children (Scotland) Act 1995. Local authorities should consider whether a child in need assessment should be carried out. Support provided under children’s legislation may include the provision of accommodation.

Family

Dependants of failed asylum seekers are defined in the same way as the dependents of asylum seekers. Dependants can include a spouse, a child or a spouse’s child under 18, a child of close family, a child living as part of his household and a partner living with him as part of his household for at least two of the three years prior to the asylum claim. Where a dependant on an asylum claim has a claim to asylum in their own right this should be made at the earliest opportunity. People in this situation should be referred to an immigration advisor.

Failed asylum seekers with children under 18 continue to be supported by asylum support until removal from the UK. They are not moved on to section 4 support. This does not apply where children are born after appeal rights have been exhausted.

Where there are children local authorities should be mindful of their duties under the Children (Scotland) Act 1995.

Unaccompanied Asylum Seeking Children

The UKBA defines an unaccompanied asylum seeking child (UASC) as:

- applying for asylum in their own right; and;
- separated from both parents and is not being cared for by an adult who by law has responsibility to do so

The UKBA will process the asylum claim of a UASC and may grant refugee status or HP on protection need grounds. Where a UASC does not qualify for a protection status on any of these grounds the UKBA will grant DL for three years or until the child is 17.5 years old.\(^{182}\) The UASC may be entitled to appeal a refusal of refugee or HP status and should be referred to an immigration advisor.\(^{183}\) If the UASC is seeking to extend any grant of DL then an application must be made with the UKBA before their current DL expires otherwise the UASC will be subject to removal once they reach 188 years of age.

Responsibilities under the Children (Scotland) Act 1995

Local authorities are responsible for the accommodation and support of UASCs. An unaccompanied asylum seeking child is a ‘child in need’.\(^{184}\) Local authorities have a duty to safeguard and promote the wellbeing of children in need.\(^{185}\) Local authorities should conduct a full needs assessment under the Children (Scotland) Act. Most UASCs will also be ‘looked after’ children with accommodation provided for them under section 25 of the Children (Scotland) Act 1995 on the basis of no one having parental responsibility towards them. All UASCs under 16 should be provided for under section 25. Some UASCs between the ages of 16-18 may only require to be supported at a lower level, but this would be based on an assessment of their needs. However, it is expected that most UASCs between 16-18 will be looked after by local authorities under section 25.

What services a UASC is eligible for depends on their immigration status. A UASC with refugee status, HP or DL will be entitled to access mainstream services. However, if an asylum claim is refused and there are no further in-country avenues for appeal a UASC becomes a failed asylum seeker and (if over 18) is excluded from Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968 and the Children (Scotland) Act 1995, unless human rights considerations require the provision of support.

In general, UASCs will be able to get their needs met under the Children (Scotland) Act 1995. Where a UASC has been looked after under section 25 they may continue to be looked after and \(^{182}\) Due to the UKBA policy commitment that: ‘no unaccompanied child will be removed from the United Kingdom unless the Secretary of State is satisfied that safe and adequate reception arrangements are in place in the country to which the child is to be removed’.

---

\(^{183}\) Immigration advisors should be registered with the OISC.

\(^{184}\) Defined in s.93 C(S)A

\(^{185}\) S.22 C(S)A accommodated until the age of 21 depending on a needs led assessment. Section 25(3) allows for the continuation of support where this is considered to safeguard and promote the child’s welfare. Case law in England establishes that UASC’s who have had accommodation provided to them by local authorities are in fact ‘looked after’ and as such qualify for the after-care provisions available to ‘looked after’ children. This case law has not been tested in Scotland.

Wider Responsibilities

The support local authorities should offer UASC is not limited to financial assistance and accommodation. Local authorities’ duties are to safeguard and promote the wellbeing of UASCs in the same way as for other ‘children in need’. As part of their duties local authorities should ensure UASC have access to specialist legal representation to prepare their asylum claim and/or appeal. Social workers may need to accompany UASC to UKBA interviews to act as a ‘responsible adult’. Their main role in this context is to ensure the child/ young person’s welfare and best interests are safeguarded during the interview. Social workers will need to work with UASCs to develop pathway plans regarding their education and future, this may include the possibility of eventual removal from the UK. Local authorities may need to assist children in tracing their family by putting them in touch with relevant agencies. They must bear in mind that UASC are often particularly vulnerable to abuse and may have been trafficked. Local Authority staff should be aware of their responsibility to act as the ‘first responder’ if there are grounds for concern that a person may be a victim of human trafficking.

Age Assessments

Where a UASC’s claimed age is queried by either the local authority or the UKBA the local authority is the lead agency in conducting Merton compliant age assessments. A local authority must assess age for itself and not adopt a decision on age made by another agency. Stanley Burton J lays out the basic elements of age assessment as follows:

> The assessment of age in borderline cases is a difficult matter, but it is not complex. It is not an issue which requires anything approaching a trial, and judicialisation of the process is in my judgment to be avoided. It is a matter which may be determined informally, provided safeguards of minimum standards of inquiry and of fairness are adhered to.

> It is apparent from the foregoing that, except in clear cases, the decision maker cannot determine age solely on the basis of the appearance of the applicant. In general, the decision maker must seek to elicit the general background of the applicant, including his family circumstances and history, his educational background, and his activities during the previous few years. Ethnic and cultural information may also be important. If there is reason to doubt the applicant’s statement as to his age, the decision maker will have to make an assessment of his credibility, and he will have to ask questions designed to test his credibility.

191 R (on application of B) v LB of Merton [2003] EWHC 1689
Persons Unlawfully in the UK

This group are often called ‘illegal immigrants’ but this term has no definition in UK immigration law. Persons unlawfully in the UK include those who have entered the UK illegally (illegal entrants) and those who may have entered the UK legally but whose stay is now outside their conditions of stay (overstayers).

Local authorities have a duty to inform the UKBA of any persons unlawfully in the UK.

Social Care

Schedule 3 of the Nationality, Immigration and Asylum Act 2002 excludes persons unlawfully in the UK from social care support under sections 12 (general social welfare services) and 13A (residential accommodation with nursing) of the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968. This exclusion applies unless a refusal of services would breach human rights. Schedule 3 also excludes adults from application of s.22 (promotion of welfare of children in need), 29 (after care) and 30 (financial assistance) of the Children (Scotland) Act 1995. Children are exempt from schedule 3, but their parents or carers may be excluded from any support provided unless human rights obligations dictate otherwise. Local authorities need to conduct a human rights assessment to consider what support they may need to offer persons unlawfully in the UK.

Some social care provisions are not listed in schedule 3 but access to them is limited following section 120 of the Immigration Asylum Act 1999 to those cases where the need for care does not arise solely due to destitution or the anticipated effects of destitution. These social care provisions are section 13B (provision of care and after-care) of the Social Work (Scotland) Act 1968 and sections 25 to 27 (provision of services) of the Mental Health (Care and Treatment) (Scotland) Act 2003.

Benefits

Persons unlawfully in the UK have no entitlements to benefits.

Tax Credits

Persons unlawfully in the UK have no entitlement to tax credits

Housing

Persons unlawfully in the UK have no entitlement to housing allocation or homelessness provision under the Housing (Scotland) Act 1987. Where there are social care needs, local authorities should

192 NIAA 2002, Schedule 3, para 14
193 S. 118 &s.119 IAA 1999
consider whether they can provide accommodation in response to such needs. Local authorities should also consider whether human rights considerations oblige them to provide accommodation.

Family

Local Authorities should remember that their duties to children under the Children (Scotland) Act 1995 endure regardless of the child’s immigration status.

Where carers are excluded from support provided under the children’s legislation by schedule 3, they may re-qualify for support due to the child’s rights to family life under Article 8. Local authorities should conduct human rights assessments and fully consider the duties that may be owed to persons unlawfully in the UK.

(6) Any action taken under this regulation on grounds of public policy, public security or public health shall be in accordance with regulation 21.

Decisions taken on public policy, public security and public health grounds

21.—(1) In this regulation a “relevant decision” means an EEA decision taken on the grounds of public policy, public security or public health.

(2) A relevant decision may not be taken to serve economic ends.

(3) A relevant decision may not be taken in respect of a person with a permanent right of residence under regulation 15 except on serious grounds of public policy or public security.

(4) A relevant decision may not be taken except on imperative grounds of public security in respect of an EEA national who—

(a) has resided in the United Kingdom for a continuous period of at least ten years prior to the relevant decision; or

(b) is under the age of 18, unless the relevant decision is necessary in his best interests, as provided for in the Convention on the Rights of the Child adopted by the General Assembly of the United Nations on 20th November 1989.

(5) Where a relevant decision is taken on grounds of public policy or public security it shall, in addition to complying with the preceding paragraphs of this regulation, be taken in accordance with the following principles—

(a) the decision must comply with the principle of proportionality;

(b) the decision must be based exclusively on the personal conduct of the person concerned;

(c) the personal conduct of the person concerned must represent a genuine, present and sufficiently serious threat affecting one of the fundamental interests of society;

(d) matters isolated from the particulars of the case or which relate to considerations of general prevention do not justify the decision;

(e) a person’s previous criminal convictions do not in themselves justify the decision.

(6) Before taking a relevant decision on the grounds of public policy or public security in relation to a person who is resident in the United Kingdom the decision maker must take account of considerations such as the age, state of health, family and economic situation of the person, the person’s length of residence in the United Kingdom, the person’s social and cultural integration into the United Kingdom and the extent of the person’s links with his country of origin.

(7) In the case of a relevant decision taken on grounds of public health—

(a) a disease that does not have epidemic potential as defined by the relevant instruments of the World Health Organisation or is not a disease to which section 38 of the Public Health (Control of Disease) Act 1984 applies (detention in hospital of a person with a notifiable disease) shall not constitute grounds for the decision; and

(b) if the person concerned is in the United Kingdom, diseases occurring after the three month period beginning on the date on which he arrived in the United Kingdom shall not constitute grounds for the decision.

PART 5

22.—(1) This regulation applies to a person who claims a right of admission to the United Kingdom under regulation 11 as—

(a) a person, not being an EEA national, who is a family member of an EEA national, a family member who has retained the right of residence or a person with a permanent right of residence under regulation 15; or
(b) an EEA national, where there is reason to believe that he may fall to be excluded under regulation 19(1) or (1A).

(2) A person to whom this regulation applies is to be treated as if he were a person seeking leave to enter the United Kingdom under the 1971 Act for the purposes of paragraphs 2, 3, 4, 7, 16 to 18 and 21 to 24 of Schedule 2 to the 1971 Act (administrative provisions as to control on entry etc), except that—

(a) the reference in paragraph 2(1) to the purpose for which the immigration officer may examine any persons who have arrived in the United Kingdom is to be read as a reference to the purpose of determining whether he is a person who is to be granted admission under these Regulations;

(b) the references in paragraphs 4(2A), 7 and 16(1) to a person who is, or may be, given leave to enter are to be read as references to a person who is, or may be, granted admission under these Regulations; and

(c) a medical examination is not be carried out under paragraph 2 or paragraph 7 as a matter of routine and may only be carried out within three months of a person’s arrival in the United Kingdom.

(3) For so long as a person to whom this regulation applies is detained, or temporarily admitted or released while liable to detention, under the powers conferred by Schedule 2 to the 1971 Act, he is deemed not to have been admitted to the United Kingdom.

Person refused admission

23.—(1) This regulation applies to a person who is in the United Kingdom and has been refused admission to the United Kingdom—

(a) because he does not meet the requirement of regulation 11 (including where he does not meet those requirements because his EEA family permit, residence card or permanent residence card has been revoked by an immigration officer in accordance with regulation 20); or

(b) in accordance with regulation 19(1), (1A) or (2).

(2) A person to whom this regulation applies, is to be treated as if he were a person refused leave to enter under the 1971 Act for the purposes of paragraphs 8, 10, 10A, 11, 16 to 19 and 21 to 24 of Schedule 2 to the 1971 Act, except that the reference in paragraph 19 to a certificate of entitlement, entry clearance or work permit is to be read as a reference to an EEA family permit, residence card or a permanent residence card.

Person subject to removal

24.—(1) If there are reasonable grounds for suspecting that a person is someone who may be removed from the United Kingdom under regulation 19(3), that person may be detained under the authority of an immigration officer pending a decision whether or not to remove the person under that regulation, and paragraphs 17 and 18 of Schedule 2 to the 1971 Act shall apply in relation to the detention of such a person as those paragraphs apply in relation to a person who may be detained under paragraph 16 of that Schedule.”

(2) Where the decision is taken to remove a person under regulation 19(3)(a), the person is to be treated as if he were a person to whom section 10(1)(a) of the 1999 Act (removal of certain persons unlawfully in the United Kingdom) applied, and section 10 of that Act (removal of certain persons unlawfully in the United Kingdom) is to apply accordingly.

(3) Where the decision is taken to remove a person under regulation 19(3)(b), the person is to be treated as if he were a person to whom section 3(5)(a) of the 1971 Act (liability to deportation) applied, and section 5 of that Act (procedure for deportation) and Schedule 3 to that Act (supplementary provision as to deportation) are to apply accordingly.
(4) A person who enters the United Kingdom in breach of a deportation or exclusion order shall be removable as an illegal entrant under Schedule 2 to the 1971 Act and the provisions of that Schedule shall apply accordingly.

(5) Where such a deportation order is made against a person but he is not removed under the order during the two year period beginning on the date on which the order is made, the Secretary of State shall only take action to remove the person under the order after the end of that period if, having assessed whether there has been any material change in circumstances since the deportation order was made, he considers that the removal continues to be justified on the grounds of public policy, public security or public health.

(6) A person to whom this regulation applies shall be allowed one month to leave the United Kingdom, beginning on the date on which he is notified of the decision to remove him, before being removed pursuant to that decision except—
(a) in duly substantiated cases of urgency;
(b) where the person is detained pursuant to the sentence or order of any court;
(c) where a person is a person to whom regulation 24(4) applies.

Revocation of deportation and exclusion orders

24A.—(1) A deportation or exclusion order shall remain in force unless it is revoked by the Secretary of State under this regulation.

(2) A person who is subject to a deportation or exclusion order may apply to the Secretary of State to have it revoked if the person considers that there has been a material change in the circumstances that justified the making of the order.

(3) An application under paragraph (2) shall set out the material change in circumstances relied upon by the applicant and may only be made whilst the applicant is outside the United Kingdom.

(4) On receipt of an application under paragraph (2), the Secretary of State shall revoke the order if the Secretary of State considers that the order can no longer be justified on grounds of public policy, public security or public health in accordance with regulation 21.

(5) The Secretary of State shall take a decision on an application under paragraph (2) no later than six months after the date on which the application is received.

PART 6

APPEALS UNDER THESE REGULATIONS

Interpretation of Part 6

25.—(1) In this Part—
“Asylum and Immigration Tribunal” has the same meaning as in the 2002 Act;
“Commission” has the same meaning as in the Special Immigration Appeals Commission Act 1997(19);
“the Human Rights Convention” has the same meaning as “the Convention” in the Human Rights Act 1998(20); and
“the Refugee Convention” means the Convention relating to the Status of Refugees done at Geneva on 28th July 1951(21) and the Protocol relating to the Status of Refugees done at New York on 31st January 1967(22).

(2) For the purposes of this Part, and subject to paragraphs (3) and (4), an appeal is to be treated as pending during the period when notice of appeal is given and ending when the appeal is finally determined, withdrawn or abandoned.
(3) An appeal is not to be treated as finally determined while a further appeal may be brought; and, if such a further appeal is brought, the original appeal is not to be treated as finally determined until the further appeal is determined, withdrawn or abandoned.

(4) A pending appeal is not to be treated as abandoned solely because the appellant leaves the United Kingdom.

Appeal rights

26.—(1) Subject to the following paragraphs of this regulation, a person may appeal under these Regulations against an EEA decision.

(2) If a person claims to be an EEA national, he may not appeal under these Regulations unless he produces a valid national identity card or passport issued by an EEA State.

(3) If a person claims to be the family member or relative of an EEA national he may not appeal under these Regulations unless he produces—

(a) an EEA family permit; or

(b) other proof that he is related as claimed to an EEA national.

(4) A person may not bring an appeal under these Regulations on a ground certified under paragraph (5) or rely on such a ground in an appeal brought under these Regulations.

(5) The Secretary of State or an immigration officer may certify a ground for the purposes of paragraph (4) if it has been considered in a previous appeal brought under these Regulations or under section 82(1) of the 2002 Act(23).

(6) Except where an appeal lies to the Commission, an appeal under these Regulations lies to the Asylum and Immigration Tribunal.

(7) The provisions of or made under the 2002 Act referred to in Schedule 1 shall have effect for the purposes of an appeal under these Regulations to the Asylum and Immigration Tribunal in accordance with that Schedule.

Out of country appeals

27.—(1) Subject to paragraphs (2) and (3), a person may not appeal under regulation 26 whilst he is in the United Kingdom against an EEA decision—

(a) to refuse to admit him to the United Kingdom;

(aa) to make an exclusion order against him;

(b) to refuse to revoke a deportation or exclusion order made against him;

(c) to refuse to issue him with an EEA family permit; or

(d) to remove him from the United Kingdom after he has entered the United Kingdom in breach of a deportation or exclusion order.

(2) Paragraphs (1)(a) and (aa) do not apply where the person is in the United Kingdom and—

(a) the person a valid EEA family permit, registration certificate, residence card, document certifying permanent residence or permanent residence card on his arrival in the United Kingdom or can otherwise prove that he is resident in the United Kingdom;

(b) the person is deemed not to have been admitted to the United Kingdom under regulation 22(3) but at the date on which notice of the decision to refuse to admit him is given he has been in the United Kingdom for at least 3 months or;

(c) a ground of the appeal is that, in taking the decision, the decision maker acted in breach of his rights under the Human Rights Convention or the Refugee Convention, unless the Secretary of State certifies that that ground of appeal is clearly unfounded.

(3) Paragraph (1)(d) does not apply where a ground of the appeal is that, in taking the decision, the decision maker acted in breach of the appellant’s rights under the Human Rights Convention or the Refugee Convention, unless the Secretary of State certifies that that ground of appeal is clearly unfounded.

Appeals to the Commission
28.—(1) An appeal against an EEA decision lies to the Commission where paragraph (2) or (4) applies.

(2) This paragraph applies if the Secretary of State certifies that the EEA decision was taken—
(a) by the Secretary of State wholly or partly on a ground listed in paragraph (3); or
(b) in accordance with a direction of the Secretary of State which identifies the person to whom the decision relates and which is given wholly or partly on a ground listed in paragraph (3).

(3) The grounds mentioned in paragraph (2) are that the person’s exclusion or removal from the United Kingdom is—
(a) in the interests of national security; or
(b) in the interests of the relationship between the United Kingdom and another country.

(4) This paragraph applies if the Secretary of State certifies that the EEA decision was taken wholly or partly in reliance on information which in his opinion should not be made public—
(a) in the interests of national security;
(b) in the interests of the relationship between the United Kingdom and another country; or
(c) otherwise in the public interest.

(5) In paragraphs (2) and (4) a reference to the Secretary of State is to the Secretary of State acting in person.

(6) Where a certificate is issued under paragraph (2) or (4) in respect of a pending appeal to the Asylum and Immigration Tribunal the appeal shall lapse.

(7) An appeal against an EEA decision lies to the Commission where an appeal lapses by virtue of paragraph (6).

(8) The Special Immigration Appeals Commission Act 1997 shall apply to an appeal to the Commission under these Regulations as it applies to an appeal under section 2 of that Act to which subsection (2) of that section applies (appeals against an immigration decision) but paragraph (i) of that subsection shall not apply in relation to such an appeal.

Effect of appeals to the Asylum and Immigration Tribunal

29.—(1) This Regulation applies to appeals under these Regulations made to the Asylum and Immigration Tribunal.

(2) If a person in the United Kingdom appeals against an EEA decision to refuse to admit him to the United Kingdom, any directions for his removal from the United Kingdom previously given by virtue of the refusal cease to have effect, except in so far as they have already been carried out, and no directions may be so given while the appeal is pending.

(3) If a person in the United Kingdom appeals against an EEA decision to remove him from the United Kingdom, any directions given under section 10 of the 1999 Act or Schedule 3 to the 1971 Act for his removal from the United Kingdom are to have no effect, except in so far as they have already been carried out, while the appeal is pending.

(4) But the provisions of Part I of Schedule 2, or as the case may be, Schedule 3 to the 1971 Act with respect to detention and persons liable to detention apply to a person appealing against a refusal to admit him or a decision to remove him as if there were in force directions for his removal from the United Kingdom, except that he may not be detained on board a ship or aircraft so as to compel him to leave the United Kingdom while the appeal is pending.

(5) In calculating the period of two months limited by paragraph 8(2) of Schedule 2 to the 1971 Act for—
(a) the giving of directions under that paragraph for the removal of a person from the United Kingdom; and
(b) the giving of a notice of intention to give such directions, any period during which there is pending an appeal by him under is to be disregarded.

(6) If a person in the United Kingdom appeals against an EEA decision to remove him from the United Kingdom, a deportation order is not to be made against him under section 5 of the 1971 Act while the appeal is pending.
Paragraph 29 of Schedule 2 to the 1971 Act (grant of bail pending appeal) applies to a person who has an appeal pending under these Regulations as it applies to a person who has an appeal pending under section 82(1) of the 2002 Act.

Leave under the 1971 Act
1.—(1) In accordance with section 7 of the Immigration Act 1988(26), a person who is admitted to or acquires a right to reside in the United Kingdom under these Regulations shall not require leave to remain in the United Kingdom under the 1971 Act during any period in which he has a right to reside under these Regulations but such a person shall require leave to remain under the 1971 Act during any period in which he does not have such a right.
(2) Where a person has leave to enter or remain under the 1971 Act which is subject to conditions and that person also has a right to reside under these Regulations, those conditions shall not have effect for as long as the person has that right to reside.

Persons not subject to restriction on the period for which they may remain
2.—(1) For the purposes of the 1971 Act and the British Nationality Act 1981(27), a person who has a permanent right of residence under regulation 15 shall be regarded as a person who is in the United Kingdom without being subject under the immigration laws to any restriction on the period for which he may remain.
(2) But a qualified person, the family member of a qualified person and a family member who has retained the right of residence shall not, by virtue of that status, be so regarded for those purposes.

Carriers’ liability under the 1999 Act
3. For the purposes of satisfying a requirement to produce a visa under section 40(1)(b) of the 1999 Act (charges in respect of passenger without proper documents), “a visa of the required kind” includes an EEA family permit, a residence card or a permanent residence card required for admission under regulation 11(2).

Appeals under the 2002 Act and previous immigration Acts

Any existing appeal under those sections of those Acts or under the Asylum and Immigration Appeals Act 1993, the Asylum and Immigration Act 1996 or the 1999 Act shall be treated as abandoned.

(3) Subject to paragraph (4), a person may appeal to the Asylum and Immigration Tribunal under section 83(2) of the 2002 Act against the rejection of his asylum claim where—

(a) that claim has been rejected, but

(b) he has a right to reside in the United Kingdom under these Regulations.

(4) Paragraph (3) shall not apply if the person is an EEA national and the Secretary of State certifies that the asylum claim is clearly unfounded.

(5) The Secretary of State shall certify the claim under paragraph (4) unless satisfied that it is not clearly unfounded.

(6) In addition to the national of a State which is a contracting party to the Agreement referred to in section 84(2) of the 2002 Act, a Swiss national shall also be treated as an EEA national for the purposes of section 84(1)(d) of that Act.

(7) An appeal under these Regulations against an EEA decision (including an appeal made on or after 1st April 2003 which is treated as an appeal under these Regulations under Schedule 4 but not an appeal made before that date) shall be treated as an appeal under section 82(1) of the 2002 Act against an immigration decision for the purposes of section 96(1)(a) of that Act.

(8) Section 120 of the 2002 Act shall apply to a person if an EEA decision has been taken or may be taken in respect of him and, accordingly, the Secretary of State or an immigration officer may by notice require a statement from that person under subsection (2) of that section and that notice shall have effect for the purpose of section 96(2) of the 2002 Act.
